Mine book emas — my book. She knows he emas — She knows him. Bugungi tuzatish namunasi: Our bags birikmasida our dan keyin ot bormi? → ha, bags. Tushuntirish

Har bir doska modelini vaziyat yoki buyum bilan oching. Avval o‘zingiz namuna qiling, keyin juftlikda, oxirida yordamsiz tekshiring. Olmoshni be yoki tayyor birikmada ishlating. O‘zlik/o‘zaro kartalarda yangi harakat gapini talab qilmang. 4.9: One birlik, ones ko‘plik sanaladigan ot o‘rnini bosadi; want fe’li shart emas. 4.10: Nobody o‘zi inkor ma’noda, yana not kerak emas. Somebody biror kishi, oddiy so‘roqda anybody. 4.11: Something/anything/nothing biror narsa/so‘roqdagi narsa/hech narsa ma’nolarini be bilan taniting. O‘qish — «The Empty Gift Box»: avval mazmunni aytiring, so‘ng har javob yonida matndagi dalilni belgilang. Tinglash — «The Mystery Pockets»: transkriptni yashiring; birinchi o‘qishda vaziyat, ikkinchisida uch tafsilot. Javobdan keyingina transkriptni oching. One birlik ot, ones ko‘plik ot o‘rnida. Something/nobody bilan is ni saqlang. Nothing o‘zi inkor ma’noda; not nothing qo‘shmang. Reading: avval sarlavha va rasm/real buyum, keyin uch savolga matndan dalil. Listening: matnni yashirib ikki marta tabiiy, sekin o‘qing; avval kim/nima, keyin tafsilot. Savolni o‘zbekcha tushuntiring, bir so‘zli javobni qabul qiling. Qiynaluvchiga ikki tanlov va ko‘rsatish imkonini bering; tez ishlovchiga shu shaklda boshqa rasm bering. Gapirish vazifasi: Ikki qutini one bilan qayta atang. Ichidagini something/nothing, odamni somebody/nobody bilan be gapida ayting. Need/don’t need talab qilinmaydi. Tayyor yozuv namunasini dastlabki urinishdan keyin ko‘rsating; nusxa ko‘chirishni mustaqil natija deb baholamang.

Xato

Chegara xatosi: tayyor kartani tanish o‘rniga hali o‘tilmagan fe’lni yasatish. Olmoshni be yoki tayyor birikmada ishlating. O‘zlik/o‘zaro kartalarda yangi harakat gapini talab qilmang. Mine book emas — my book. She knows he emas — She knows him. Bugungi tuzatish namunasi: Bir nechta boxes o‘rniga one yoki ones? → ones. One birlik, ones ko‘plik sanaladigan ot o‘rnini bosadi; want fe’li shart emas.

Yordam

Tayanch: «The Empty Gift Box» savollarini bittadan bering, ikkita javob variantidan tanlating; doskadagi «4.9 · One / ones — otni takrorlamaslik: the blue box → the blue one; small boxes → small ones» modelini ko‘rinadigan qoldiring. Rasmga ko‘rsatish yoki tayyor birikmani aytish yetarli; yangi zamon bilan murakkablashtirmang. Kengaytirish: «The Mystery Pockets»dagi javobni matndan dalil bilan izohlatsin; bugun o‘tilgan shaklda bitta yangi buyum yoki shaxs bilan misol keltirsin; faqat tanish deb belgilangan kartani tuslamasin.

0–10 · Oldingi natijani qaytarish

Writing namuna — urinishdan keyin

We have a quiet evening every Wednesday. We don't watch television, and we don't use our phones at dinner. My father does the cooking. My mother goes to her singing club after work. My brother makes paper boats. He doesn't make planes because our room is small. I read a story to my grandmother. She has a favourite chair by the window. She doesn't sleep during the story. She listens carefully and asks questions. Our evening doesn't need a screen. It has food, stories and a small paper fleet.

Reading · The Library Cat's Routine

Our library opens at nine on weekdays. Paper comes from plant fibres. Books need dry shelves. Our librarian always checks the windows before she leaves. She usually feeds the library cat outside. The cat often sleeps near the history books. It never reads them. On Fridays, a volunteer cleans its bowl. Is the library quiet? Usually, yes. Does the cat understand the quiet rule? Its loud breakfast requests suggest a different opinion.

Reading · The Neighbourhood Book Cart

Our neighbourhood has a book cart. Two volunteers push it to the park every Sunday. They don't sell the books. People borrow one and bring it back the next week. Malika checks the names. Her brother repairs torn covers. Does the cart have a favourite stop? Yes, it does: the bench by the fountain. Children usually arrive first. One boy always brings a toy dragon. The dragon borrows nothing but listens to every story.

Reading · The Old Footbridge

Our village footbridge is eighty years old. It is fifty metres from the bus stop. The walk across it takes two minutes. How many people use it each day? About sixty people use it. How much does it cost to cross? Nothing; it is free. Who checks the bridge? A council worker checks it every Monday. Our oldest neighbour calls it the young bridge. She is ninety, so she has a point.

Reading · The Practice Room Agreement

Our music group uses the community room from six to seven on Fridays. We practise there quietly for the first ten minutes. During the session, our leader listens carefully and gives advice. Sami plays the drums well, but he sometimes plays too loudly. We work hard on the final song. After practice, we carry the chairs outside carefully. The neighbours wave from their windows. Our quiet ending is their favourite part of the concert.

Listening · The Table Tennis Schedule

Coach: We train here from five to six on Mondays.
New player: How long do we warm up?
Coach: For ten minutes. Walk slowly at first, then move quickly between the markers.
New player: Do we talk during matches?
Coach: Not during a point. Listen carefully between games. Your partner plays well, so watch her feet.
New player: I work hard, but I don't move fast yet.
Coach: That's fine. Good practice matters more than noisy shoes.

Reading · The Silent Birthday

Yesterday was my grandfather's birthday. Our family was in the garden, but Grandfather wasn't there at first. He was in the kitchen with a large bowl of cherries. The garden was quiet because our surprise was a silent party. There were paper messages on every chair. My message was 'You are wonderful!' My little brother's message was only a picture of a cake. He is six, and long words are difficult for him. Grandfather was very happy with the messages. His eyes were wet, but he wasn't sad. The cake was small and slightly crooked. My brother was proud of it. At the end, everyone was noisy again. A silent party is lovely, but a family of twelve isn't silent for long.

Listening · A Wet Museum Visit

Nargiza: Yes, it was. The dinosaur room was wonderful.
Guide: Were all your classmates there?
Nargiza: No, they weren't. Aziz was at home with a cold. There were nineteen of us.
Guide: Was the weather nice?
Nargiza: No. Our shoes were wet, but the museum was warm. My socks were two different colours, so everyone was cheerful.
Guide: Was your teacher angry about the noise?
Nargiza: No, she wasn't. She was interested in a tiny dinosaur egg.
Guide: And the cafe?
Nargiza: The cafe wasn't open. Our sandwiches were in our bags, so that wasn't a problem. My sandwich was enormous. The dinosaur was big, but my lunch was impressive too.

Reading · An Office in a Bus

Last Saturday our reading club was inside an old bus. The bus was in the school yard, and its wheels were still on it. There was a long shelf above the seats. There were forty books on the shelf and a little lamp beside the driver's seat. Our club leader was in that seat with a storybook. Why was our meeting in a bus? The library was very noisy because of a music class. The bus was peaceful, except for one sound. There was a sleepy cat under the back seat. Its name was Motor, and its quiet breathing was our background music. There were eight readers at the meeting. Everyone was comfortable, although the leader's seat was a little too high for her feet.

Listening · After the Costume Show

Mum: Where were you at four yesterday, Jasur?
Jasur: I was behind the school stage. There was a costume show.
Mum: Who was with you?
Jasur: My friend Bek was there. He was a tree, and I was a cloud.
Mum: Were your costumes heavy?
Jasur: Mine wasn't. Bek's was, because there were real branches on it.
Mum: How many people were in the audience?
Jasur: There were thirty parents. There was a baby in the front row too.
Mum: Was the baby quiet?
Jasur: Yes, she was. The adults were noisy!
Mum: Why was your face blue?
Jasur: There was blue paint inside my cloud. My face was the sky, apparently. Our art teacher was very pleased with the whole picture, but my nose was cold. Mum: That was certainly a colourful school afternoon.

Reading · The Market Without Money

Our class opened a small swap market on Friday. There wasn't a cash box, because nobody needed money. People brought useful things from home and exchanged them. I brought a puzzle and took a green notebook. My friend Lola carried a huge bag into the hall. Everyone expected toys, but she opened the bag and showed us twelve clean plant pots. Her grandmother gave them to her. There weren't any plants inside, so our science teacher added seeds to each pot. A boy near the door asked, 'Were there any rules?' There was one important rule: every object was clean and safe. We checked the tables at five and counted twenty successful swaps. Lola went home with a chess set. Her empty bag looked very relieved.

Listening · The Missing Picnic Bench

Dilshod: Was there a bench near the river yesterday?
Saida: No, there wasn't. We walked to the usual place, but there weren't any seats there.
Dilshod: What happened next?
Saida: We carried our picnic to the hill and sat on a blanket. My uncle brought bread, and my aunt made soup.
Dilshod: Were there any cups?
Saida: Yes, there were six cups in my bag. We used them for the soup.
Dilshod: That sounds unusual.
Saida: It was delicious. Then my cousin discovered a bench behind a tree.
Dilshod: So there was a seat after all!
Saida: Yes, but a family of ducks occupied the space around it. We stayed on our blanket and watched them. My uncle called it the ducks' restaurant. They ate grass; we enjoyed our soup.

Reading · A Robot with a Brush

Yesterday our technology club tested a painting robot. We attached a brush to a small toy car and placed paper on the floor. The car moved slowly and painted a blue line. It stopped near my shoe, but it didn't touch it. We wanted a picture of a river. Unfortunately, the second line looked like a very tired snake. Our teacher didn't laugh at the picture. She asked, 'Did you plan the turns?' We didn't plan them. We only pressed the forward button and hoped for art. Then we marked three stopping points on the paper and tried again. This time the river looked good. We cleaned the wheels, washed the brush and displayed our picture. The robot didn't sign its work, so we added all our names.

Listening · A Cake Delivery Check

Baker: Oh dear. Pepper is a dog. Did you taste the cake?
Customer: No, we didn't. We noticed the little bone shapes and called you.
Baker: Thank you. We packed the wrong box. Your cake is here with pink flowers.

Reading · The Umbrella Race

Two days ago our street held an umbrella race. It wasn't a running race. Each team decorated an umbrella and walked slowly across the square. My sister and I made a yellow sun on ours. We started at eleven, just before a light shower. Other teams carried fish, flowers and even a tiny paper castle above their heads. Who won the prize? A quiet man with a plain black umbrella won it. He put a clear plastic pocket on top and filled it with colourful autumn leaves. The judges loved the idea. The prize was a blue watering can, which made everyone laugh in the rain. We didn't win, but our yellow sun stayed bright. We were cold at the end, so we went home for hot tea.

Reading · The School Radio Mystery

Our school radio had a strange problem yesterday. At nine, a loud chicken noise came from every classroom speaker. There wasn't a farm programme on the timetable. The head teacher was in a meeting, and the radio team was in the studio. We checked the computer first. There were only music files on the screen. Then Sara noticed a small phone beside the microphone. Its alarm was on, and its alarm sound was a chicken. The phone belonged to our sports teacher. He used that sound because ordinary alarms didn't wake him up. We turned off the microphone and returned the phone. Did the lessons start late? No, they didn't. Everyone was awake already. The sports teacher was embarrassed, but he joined our next radio show and explained the mystery.

Listening · Lost at the Sports Hall

Receptionist: What did you lose at the sports hall?
Visitor: A small red bag. I was here yesterday evening for badminton.
Receptionist: Were there any valuables inside?
Visitor: No, there weren't. There was a towel and a banana.
Receptionist: When did you leave?
Visitor: At seven. I walked home with my brother.
Receptionist: Did you sit near the windows?
Visitor: No, I didn't. My chair was beside the water machine.
Receptionist: We found a red bag there, but there wasn't a banana inside.
Visitor: Really? Was there a yellow banana picture on the towel?
Receptionist: Yes, there was!
Visitor: That's mine. I ate the real banana before the game. My memory is worse than my badminton.
Receptionist: Your bag is safe. Please collect it before six today; we close early on Fridays. Visitor: Thank you. I will come after lunch today.

Reading · Behind the Bakery Window

At half past six yesterday morning, our bakery was already busy. My aunt was mixing dough in a large bowl. Her assistant was arranging round loaves on a tray, and I was writing prices on a board. I wasn't baking anything; I am still learning. Outside, a man was waiting with an empty basket. He wasn't looking at the bread. He was looking at our window display, because a toy bear was sitting between two enormous loaves. The bear was wearing a paper hat. We were preparing a display for Children's Day, and the bear was our new baker. In the corner, the radio was playing quiet music. Our real cat was sleeping under a chair. It wasn't helping, but nobody expected much work from the cat before breakfast.

Listening · The Swimming Pool Window

Coach: Tell me about the pool at two yesterday, Anvar.
Anvar: The small children were practising near the steps. Their instructor was holding a red float.
Coach: And the older group?
Anvar: They were swimming in the middle lanes. I wasn't swimming with them. I was sitting beside the pool with a sore ankle.
Coach: Your sister was there too.
Anvar: Yes, she was drawing the swimmers for her art homework. She wasn't watching her paper very carefully. Water was dripping from my hair onto her picture.
Coach: Oh dear!
Anvar: It looked like rain. She was drawing an indoor pool, but her picture had terrible weather. Our father was waiting outside with dry towels. He wasn't using his phone. He was counting the clouds and hoping for sunshine on our walk home.

Reading · A Photograph with No Bride

Our photography club found an unusual wedding picture in a local album. There was no bride in the centre. Instead, a little boy was standing on a chair and holding a large spoon. Behind him, two musicians were looking under a table. What were they looking for? The note below the picture gives the answer: their drumstick. A woman near the door was pointing towards the boy. Was he playing a drum with the spoon? No, he was directing an imaginary orchestra. The guests were smiling, and the photographer was kneeling on the floor. The bride and groom were waiting outside for the next picture. Our club spent ten minutes discussing this single photograph. It shows a wedding, but its small details tell a funny story about a child's busy imagination.

Listening · Checking the Greenhouse Camera

Manager: Were you working in the greenhouse at noon, Rustam?
Rustam: Yes. I was checking the tomato plants near the back wall.
Manager: What was Zebo doing?
Rustam: She was carrying water from the tank. Why do you ask?
Manager: A camera picture shows a big shadow on the wall. Was somebody standing on a ladder?
Rustam: No. Nobody was using a ladder. Zebo was holding her umbrella above a tray of young plants.
Manager: Why was she using an umbrella indoors?
Rustam: Water was falling from a broken pipe. She was protecting the plants until I found the tap.
Manager: Were the plants getting wet?
Rustam: Only a little. The umbrella was enormous. It looked like a roof for a tiny forest.
Manager: Where were the visitors waiting?
Rustam: At the front door, away from the water.

Reading · The Cinema's Unexpected Star

We were watching a nature film at the community cinema when the screen suddenly went dark. At first, everyone stayed quiet. A small green light was moving across the ceiling, and some children thought it was part of the film. While the technician was checking the projector, the manager opened the side door. A real moth flew into the room and landed on the white screen. Its shadow looked enormous under the emergency lamp. Someone whispered, 'The next animal is here.' The audience laughed. The technician found a loose cable and connected it again. The film returned after four minutes, but the moth stayed near the lamp. We were watching tiny insects on screen while a real insect was watching us. Nobody asked it for a ticket.

Reading · Grandma's Shopping Basket

My grandmother keeps an old shopping basket beside her modern bicycle. She used to walk to the market every morning. She didn't use to carry a phone or a shopping list. She remembered everything, except salt. There was always one forgotten packet of salt. The market used to have only six stalls, and the fruit seller used to know every customer's name. Grandma didn't use to buy strawberries in winter because nobody sold them then. Today the market is much bigger, and she cycles there twice a week. She uses her phone for a list now. The first item is always salt. Last Sunday I went with her and carried the old basket. It still has a little blue ribbon on the handle, exactly like the basket in her childhood photograph.

Presenter: That sounds difficult.
Karim: It was. One morning I played a duck sound instead of the weather music. Our listeners were very amused.
Presenter: Did you work alone?
Karim: No. Three people used to prepare the morning show. We didn't use to record at home. Everyone came here, even during heavy snow.
Presenter: And this red chair?
Karim: It used to belong to our news reader. It made a loud squeak. Sometimes the chair was louder than the news.

Reading · The Evening Shoe Line

When my father was a child, his family used to live above a small repair shop. Every evening, his grandfather would line up the family shoes beside the door. He would clean each pair and tell a short story about its owner. Father's muddy shoes usually received an adventure story. His aunt's shiny shoes received a story about a queen. Did the family use to listen together? Yes, they did. They would sit on the stairs with warm milk. The shop used to be cold in winter, but the upstairs room was comfortable. One evening, Grandfather put tiny paper crowns on every shoe. That happened only once, on Father's tenth birthday. Father still remembers it. Today he cleans his own children's shoes, but his stories are mostly about missing socks.

Listening · A Former Ferry Passenger

Interviewer: Did you use to cross the river by boat, Mrs Rahimova?
Guest: Yes, I did. There wasn't a bridge when I was young.
Interviewer: What would you do during the journey?
Guest: I would count the birds, and my brother would wave at the fishermen. The journey usually took fifteen minutes.
Interviewer: Did the boat use to be crowded?
Guest: Only on market days. It used to carry bicycles, baskets and sometimes a very calm goat.
Interviewer: A goat?
Guest: Yes. It belonged to a farmer on the other side. It would stand beside his bicycle without moving.
Interviewer: What happened when the bridge opened?
Guest: We walked across it on the first day. My brother took a photograph. The goat was in the photograph too, looking rather unimpressed by modern transport.

Writing namuna — urinishdan keyin

When I was young, we used to cross the river by boat because there wasn't a bridge. The journey usually took fifteen minutes. I would count the birds, and my brother would wave at the fishermen. On market days, the boat was crowded with people and baskets. A farmer sometimes brought his calm goat. It would stand beside his bicycle. When the bridge opened, we walked across it on the first day. My brother took a photograph, and the goat appeared in it too. It didn't look very excited.

Reading · The Night the Clock Sneezed

Our town hall used to have a very unreliable clock. Every Monday, the caretaker would climb the stairs and check its mechanism. People used to joke about the town's extra ten minutes. Last autumn, our history club visited the tower. We were examining the heavy door when a strange noise came from above. It sounded like a giant sneeze. Was the caretaker working inside? No, he wasn't. He was waiting for us downstairs. While we were looking up, a pigeon flew out of a narrow window. A loose metal panel moved behind it and made the noise again. The caretaker fixed the panel that afternoon. The clock still showed the wrong time, but the tower stopped sneezing. Our guide wrote down the incident in the visitors' book, beside our ordinary names.

Our dance room used to be a furniture shop. At the beginning of each lesson, we would move the remaining chairs against the wall and practise in the centre. One day, I was demonstrating a slow turn when a customer entered with a broken chair. He was looking for the old shop. While I was explaining the change, my students were balancing on one foot behind me. The customer laughed and stayed for a trial lesson. He learned three dance steps that day. Now he comes to our classes every Thursday.

Reading · The Bench Rescue

A heavy storm broke the bench outside our youth centre last night. This morning the club leader put a message on our group page: 'We will repair the bench on Saturday. We won't throw away the wood.' The message received several replies. Diyor wrote, 'I will bring a hammer.' Malika promised paint, and her father offered his tools. Will the repair cost much? The club leader thinks it won't, because the centre already has most materials. One younger member offered six stickers and a toy screwdriver. His contribution will make the finished bench cheerful, although the real repairs need adult help. The bench will be green with a small yellow star. We will keep the old sign beside it: 'Sit here and share a good idea.' The sign survived the storm.

Listening · A Sudden Dinner Guest

Dad: Your cousin is at the station. He will be here in twenty minutes.
Lola: Oh! I'll put another plate on the table.
Dad: Thank you. We haven't got much bread.
Lola: I'll get some from the shop downstairs. Will he eat soup?
Dad: Yes, he will. He loves your mother's vegetable soup.
Lola: Will he stay tonight?
Dad: No, he won't. He has a bus ticket for nine.
Lola: Then I won't prepare the spare bed. I'll move my schoolbooks from the sofa instead.
Dad: Good idea. I'll warm the soup.
Lola: Please don't add more pepper. Last time my eyes were watering before the first spoonful.
Dad: I promise I won't. Your cousin needs dinner, not a fire alarm in his mouth.
Lola: I'll take the empty pepper pot away, just in case.

Reading · A Night at the Observatory

Our science club has a special visit next Friday. We will be at the hill observatory from seven until ten in the evening. The guide will be an astronomy student named Farida. What will we see? The moon will be our first target because its surface is easy to observe. The telescope room will be dark, but the waiting area will be bright and warm. Where will parents wait? They will be in the downstairs cafe. There will be hot tea there, but no dinner, so everyone needs food before the visit. One boy asked about moon cheese. Farida's reply was kind: 'There will be plenty of rocks, but no cheese.' The club leader will carry a small red torch. White lights disturb people's eyes during observations.

Reading · A Balcony for Butterflies

My cousin and I are going to change our empty balcony into a small flower garden. We are going to use four old wooden boxes instead of buying expensive pots. My uncle checked the balcony yesterday, and the boxes are safe near the wall. We aren't going to grow vegetables because there isn't enough sunlight for our favourite tomatoes. Are we going to attract butterflies? We hope so. We are going to plant flowers with strong colours and keep a shallow bowl of water nearby. My cousin is going to paint tiny signs for each box. One sign says 'Butterfly Hotel: No Shoes Required'. We aren't going to use that as a scientific claim; it is simply a joke for visitors. First, we need soil, seeds and a very patient afternoon.

Listening · Planning a Charity Walk

Organiser: Are you going to join our charity walk on Sunday, Nadia?
Nadia: Yes, I am. My brother is going to come too.
Organiser: Good. We are going to start at the sports centre and walk five kilometres.
Nadia: Are we going to cross the busy road?
Organiser: No, we aren't. The route follows the river path. Two volunteers are going to carry water.
Nadia: My brother is going to wear his giant carrot costume.
Organiser: Is he going to walk all five kilometres in it?
Nadia: That's his plan, but the costume is hot. He is going to bring ordinary clothes in a bag.
Organiser: Sensible. We aren't going to race, so everyone has time to enjoy the route.
Nadia: Excellent. A running carrot is funny, but a tired carrot needs a peaceful morning.

Reading · Saturday's Repair Cafe

Our neighbourhood is opening a repair cafe for one Saturday. I am meeting the volunteers at nine, and we are setting up tables in the library hall. These arrangements are already in everyone's calendar. What are people going to bring? The registration list includes lamps, clocks and several tired-looking toys. My neighbour is bringing a toy train at ten. She is going to ask about its broken wheel. We aren't going to promise repairs for every item because some problems need specialist equipment. My job is simple: I am taking photographs of each object before work begins. How are we going to label them? We are going to use numbered cards. Last year someone collected the wrong clock. It looked right, but it played a surprising bird song every hour.

Listening · An Appointment for a Dog

Assistant: Good morning. Are you still bringing Bobo to the grooming salon tomorrow?
Owner: Yes, I am. We are coming at eleven, as arranged.
Assistant: What are you going to ask our groomer to do?
Owner: Bobo needs a wash and a short haircut. We are going to visit my grandmother afterwards.
Assistant: Is someone collecting you?
Owner: Yes. My sister is meeting us outside at twelve thirty. She has a car with a special dog seat.
Assistant: What are you going to bring for Bobo?
Owner: His blue towel and a small snack. I'm not going to bring his squeaky toy. It made everyone nervous last time.
Assistant: Good plan. Our groomer is meeting another dog at one.
Owner: Then Bobo has time to look handsome before his important afternoon with Grandma.

Reading · The Ferry and the Clouds

Our class trip to the island begins tomorrow. The ferry leaves at eight fifteen, so we are meeting at the harbour at seven forty-five. Our teacher has checked the forecast. Dark clouds are moving towards the coast, and it is going to rain during the morning. We are going to take waterproof jackets. The island museum opens at ten, but its garden opens earlier. When we arrive, we will walk through the garden first. As soon as the museum opens, we will go inside. Mira has a large empty bag. 'Shall I carry the class notebooks?' she asks. The teacher agrees. Then he notices his own missing umbrella. 'I'll borrow one from the office,' he says. The ferry has a roof, but our teacher prefers a dry beginning to an educational adventure.

Baker: I'll move some into this empty one. Thank you for noticing.
Volunteer: When will the oven be ready?
Baker: When the light turns green, we will put the first bread inside.
Volunteer: And what about the children?
Baker: As soon as they wash their hands, they will shape their dough at the small table.
Volunteer: Shall we make animal shapes?

Reading · The Umbrella Library Opens

Our school is starting an umbrella library on Monday. Students are going to borrow umbrellas at reception and return them the next day. The first collection contains twelve umbrellas in bright colours. The service opens at eight, before lessons begin. I am meeting the receptionist at seven forty to arrange the stand. She is bringing numbered labels, and I am going to make a simple sign. What will happen when an umbrella breaks? Our repair club will examine it on Friday. We won't charge students for ordinary damage, but everyone needs to report a problem. As soon as the rain stops, borrowers will fold their umbrellas and leave them open in the drying area. One umbrella has a duck handle. We expect that duck to become the school's busiest bird.

Reading · A Room Full of Small Victories

The youth centre's project room looks different today. Our team has painted the walls pale blue and moved the heavy cupboards away from the windows. I have made a reading corner with three cushions. Aziz has built a low table from an old wooden door, and two volunteers have brought colourful lamps. The room has become bright and welcoming. On the noticeboard, we have written a list of completed jobs. The list includes 'Find the mysterious smell'. Our leader has found its source: a forgotten cheese sandwich inside a cardboard box. She has removed the box, and everyone has opened a window. Now the room smells of fresh paint instead. We have taken a group photograph beside the new table. The old door has a new job, and so do we.

Listening · A Bookshop Window Update

Manager: The window looks wonderful, Farhod. Tell me about the changes.
Assistant: I have arranged the travel books on the left. Dilnoza has put the cookbooks on the right.
Manager: And the little train?
Assistant: Our neighbour has lent it to us. It carries three miniature books around the central display.
Manager: That explains the tiny passengers!
Assistant: Yes. I have written their titles on small cards. The designer has made a paper mountain behind the train.
Manager: The lighting looks different too.
Assistant: We have added two warm lamps and moved the old spotlight. Customers have sent several kind messages about the window.
Manager: Excellent work. What about the spelling on the sign?
Assistant: I have checked every word. The train travels through a reading adventure, not a 'reading furniture'. My first sign was rather confusing.

Reading · The Unfinished Treasure Hunt

Our class has organised a treasure hunt for the younger students, but the materials are not all ready. We have drawn a map of the school garden. We haven't printed enough copies because the printer has stopped working. Has the caretaker checked it? Yes, he has, but he needs a new ink cartridge. Where have we hidden the prize? It is inside a clean flowerpot near the gate. We haven't used real money or sweets. The prize is a set of animal stickers. Our teacher has tested the clues and found one confusing instruction. It sends readers to the 'big green chair', but there are two green chairs. She has changed it to 'the green chair beside the pond'. A treasure hunt needs mystery, but it also needs a fair route.

Listening · Has the Podcast Uploaded?

Editor: Have you uploaded the new podcast episode, Kamola?
Kamola: No, I haven't. The file is ready, but our internet connection has failed.
Editor: What have you included in the episode?
Kamola: An interview with a local beekeeper and three questions from schoolchildren.
Editor: Has the beekeeper approved the recording?
Kamola: Yes, she has. She hasn't approved the photograph, though. Her hat covers half her face.
Editor: Which picture have you chosen instead?
Kamola: The one beside the yellow hive. Her face is clear, and there are no bees on her nose.
Editor: Have you added music?
Kamola: No, I haven't. The gentle bee sounds are enough. I haven't changed those.
Editor: Good. Please wait for the connection before trying again. We need one complete episode, not twelve tiny pieces of bee news.

Reading · My First Pottery Wheel

Have you ever made a bowl on a pottery wheel? I have, and my first bowl looked like a sleepy hat. Today I have just finished my second lesson. Our teacher has just lifted my new bowl from the wheel, and this one actually stands upright. I have never worked with clay outside this studio, so every lesson brings a surprise. My partner has made several cups before, but she has never made a plate. We help each other without touching each other's work. The teacher says patient hands are more useful than strong hands. There is a shelf of failed pots near the door. Nobody hides them. One pot has the label 'Excellent home for a very small cactus'. Mistakes belong here too, and that makes the studio a comfortable place to learn.

Listening · A Station Piano

Friend: Have you ever played a public piano, Iroda?
Iroda: No, I haven't. I have only played at home and at school.
Friend: There is one in the station hall. The previous player has just left.
Iroda: I have never played with strangers around me. What about you?
Friend: Yes, I have. I played here last month while I was waiting for my train.
Iroda: What did people do?
Friend: Two children danced, and a man tapped his suitcase. Nobody expected a concert.
Iroda: All right. I have just remembered a short song from my first music book.
Friend: Perfect. Our train hasn't arrived, so there is time.
Iroda: Please stand nearby. I don't need an audience, just one friendly face.

Reading · The Little Free Fridge

Our community has had a shared food fridge for six months. It stands inside the community centre, and volunteers check it every day. Today, Nila has already cleaned the shelves and checked the dates on the food. She hasn't written the new labels yet. Her partner has been at the centre since eight, but he still hasn't found the missing label pen. They have already looked behind the fridge and under the desk. Finally, a visitor points to Nila's hair. The pen is holding her hair in a neat bun. She laughs and starts writing. The fridge has helped local families since April. People leave sealed food with clear dates and take only what they need. The volunteers are proud of the project, even when their office supplies become hair accessories.

Captain: There are three entrances. Which one is he using?
Secretary: The one beside the swimming pool. I have already sent him a map to the football gate.
Captain: Good. Have you checked the shirt sizes?
Secretary: Yes. The shop has confirmed every size. They haven't printed our mascot upside down this time either.

Reading · A Busy Week at the Toy Library

It is Thursday, and our toy library has lent thirty games this week. Last week it lent only eighteen. I have worked here for a year, and school holidays are always busy. My colleague Sanjar has gone to the storage room for another box, so he isn't at the desk now. Our manager has been to the new toy shop and is back with a catalogue. Yesterday she bought a wooden train for the youngest visitors. How long has the library had its giant chess set? It has been here since January. The pieces are nearly as tall as our smallest visitor. This morning, a child put a scarf around the white king. We haven't removed it because the hall is chilly. Even a chess king apparently needs suitable winter clothing.

Listening · Two Trips to the New Pool

Mother: Have you been to the new swimming pool this week?
Son: Yes, I have. I went on Monday with our class.
Mother: Where is your sister now?
Son: She has gone to the pool with Aunt Maya. They left at four.
Mother: How long have you known the new coach?
Son: Since September. He taught our class at the old pool before this one opened.
Mother: Have you used the diving board?
Son: Not this week. On Monday we practised floating and turning. I lost my swimming cap, but the coach found it beside the steps.
Mother: That's useful.
Son: Yes. He has found three caps today, according to the class chat. He calls the pool a hat shop without shelves.
Mother: Let's put your name inside your cap before your next lesson.

Reading · The Repaired Music Box

Our family has owned a small music box for twenty years. It belonged to my aunt first, and she gave it to me last summer. The little dancer inside hasn't moved for several months, but today things are different. My neighbour has just repaired the spring. He has already tested the tune, and the dancer turns smoothly again. I have never seen the mechanism before. It contains tiny metal teeth and a surprisingly strong spring. Have I learned to repair music boxes? Not yet. My neighbour has shown me the parts, but I need much more practice. He went to his workshop an hour ago, and he hasn't returned. I am waiting to thank him with homemade biscuits. The dancer has her music back; our helpful neighbour deserves something sweet with his tea.

Our neighbourhood game cupboard has been open for three months. Volunteers have checked every donated game, and they have replaced missing pieces in eight boxes. Last Friday a family brought a large puzzle. We counted its pieces yesterday and found one missing corner. We haven't put it on the borrowing shelf yet. Mina has already contacted the family, but they haven't replied. I have used the cupboard twice this week. I borrowed a word game on Monday and returned it on Wednesday. The cupboard has made our evenings more sociable. However, we still record each loan carefully; being friendly doesn't mean forgetting who has each box.
